ADRCs create a single, coordinated system of information and access for seniors and adults with physical disabilities seeking long term care by minimizing confusion, enhancing individual choice, and supporting informed decision-making.

ADRCs:

- make it easier for older individuals and adults with physical disabilities to access health and social supports
- help persons stay healthy and active in their communities
- support families in their efforts to care for their loved ones at home and in the community
- streamline eligibility for seniors and adults with physical disabilities by:
 - simplifying intake, eligibility screening and determination processes
 - integrating and coordinating the process between programs and agencies
 - targeting individuals who are at imminent risk of being institutionalized
 - ensuring that consumers understand their choices

Background of ADRC Initiative

- Grants-based program announced in March, 2003, as a first-ever partnership between the Administration on Aging (AoA) and the Center for Medicaid/Medicare Services (CMS).
- South Carolina was one of the first 12 successful grant applicants nationwide. As of January, 2007, 43 states have ADRCs.
- Provides states with the means and support to effectively integrate long term support resources for consumers into a single coordinated system

National Vision

- Embrace the vision of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) to serve all ages & income levels
- Continue the vision of President Bush's New Freedom Initiative that calls for equal access for individuals with disabilities
- Create partnerships between the Aging Network and CMS to implement consumer-directed care
- Include ADRCs in Older Americans Act Reauthorization; advocate for ADRCs to be central intake for all long term care services (CMS position)
- Increase visibility of long term supports within state government.
